Stoughton's Bitters.

During the present sickly season, the use of STOUGHTON'S BITTERS, (imported from London) will be found of great service, as preventive to disease, especially where there is an infectious atmosphere and a predisposition in the habit to contagion. It eminently braces the constitution, and renovates the whole system. It may be used instead of spirits in water, tea, or other drink. It restores lost appetite, expels worms in children, and, if regularly used during the fall season, will prevent the ague and fever. In short, it only needs to be tried, to convince every one of its great efficacy.

These Bitters may be had, with copious directions, (prepared at the original warehouse in London) in quart bottles at one fourth of the former charge for the same in vials, at S. Snowden's Printing Office, Alexandria, where a bottle is constantly kept open for trial. Also, at A. BUCK'S, Fredericksburg.

For Sale,

A healthy, stout, young Negro Woman — Enquire of the Printer.

For the Alexandria Daily Advertiser.

MR. SNOWDEN,

THE direction of the Turnpike Road from the top of the Trough Hill to the ford of Little River, has, for some time, attracted the public attention, two routes are spoken of — one by Fairfax Court-House, crossing the present Turnpike Road at a little Tavern (the Blue Ball) and thence to the ford; the other through Ravensworth to Centerville, and from thence to the ford. The advocates for the first route alledge that the distance will be shortened by three, four and some say five miles, that the ground is good and every material for forming a road, plenty and near at hand, and further that it will intersect the Road from Leesburg to Centerville, at or near the Gum Spring, and thereby have a tendency to draw into the Turnpike all the Waggon, &c. coming from above Leesburg. On the other hand it is admitted that the distance will be shortened in going by the Court-House, but not to the extent asserted; but it is believed that the ground by Centerville was better and the materials plentier and nearer at hand; but, waving this, it is contended, that in taking the road by the Court-House the Company will sustain certain losses which will far overbalance whatever it may gain by shortening the distance. The distance, they say, between the old Turnpike Road and the one contemplated by the Court-House is such, that the old road must be kept open from Little River to the Blue Ball Tavern. The old road from Little River to the forks below Centerville, a distance of sixteen miles, is the main road, for all the country above those forks, to the ware-houses at Colchester and the Occoquan Mills, and therefore will never be shut up, that the part below the forks to the little Tavern, can never be shut up, because there is a great body of people living upon Bull Run, Johnny more, Popes Head, and Wolfe Runs who use that road and have no other to Alexandria; and independent of those, that, of late, a great number cross the Bull Run, coming from the Red-House and the foot of the Blue Ridge as far as Ashby's and Manassah's Gaps, that to shut up this part of the road would be a degree of oppression on the people living upon the east side of Bull Run and upon Johnny more, Pope Head and Wolfe Runs, and would altogether shut out all, from the western side of Bull Run, from the Alexandria market, who, it is said, form full three parts out of five of those who now go down the Centerville road to Alexandria. Then, if the old Turnpike Road be kept open to the little Tavern, they say, the great mass who now use this road will continue to use it, and never touch the turnpike till they reach the little Tavern, and, that it is much to be doubted whether those above the Little River will not, in dry weather, prefer the old road to avoid the toll. It will, no doubt, be granted that one grand object contemplated by the intended road, is the public benefit, by which the writer understands, not a benefit resulting to a part, but one which may, by due attention, be extended to the largest body of the community. Another object certainly will not be lost sight of by the Subscribers, a suitable compensation for the money generously advanced by them to make the road, the expense of which, it is admitted, will be great. The writer conjectures far beyond what is now supposed. Justice requires that such measures be pursued as will have the most evident tendency to answer that object, and in effecting that, the main one, of rendering the greatest good to the public, will be attained. It remains to be examined which of the two routes is most likely to effect these grand ends. To have a proper knowledge of the subject, it will be necessary to take in view other matters, which, though not immediately connected with it, will have a powerful effect upon it. The navigation of the rivers Potomac and Shenandoah the writer alludes to. The river Potomac, it is well known, is now navigable at certain seasons of the year. The company is engaged, the present year, in rendering it navigable from Harper's Ferry into tide water at all seasons. It is confidently asserted by the Directors that this will be effected by the close of the year: from their station it is to be presumed that they have good ground for that assertion; but suppose in this they are rather sanguine, yet it is reasonable to believe that they cannot be wholly mistaken, and that the river will be rendered navigable the greater part of the year. It is a fact, admitted by all acquainted with the Shenandoah, that it is a fine stream and bids fairer for a permanent navigation than the Potomac; that the obstacles to such a navigation lie in a great measure near the mouth; that, these being removed, the navigation may be rendered steady for at least nine months in the year as far up as the Forks. These are events which will, most assuredly take place; to doubt it and act as if they most certainly would not take place, would equal the madness of a man running over a precipice with his eyes open.

Considering the navigation of those rivers effected to the extent above contended for, let us examine where is the body of people to be benefitted by the road, and from what source a toll is to be produced to compensate for the heavy expence of making it. The navigation of the Shenandoah will cut off almost every thing from above the Blue Ridge. The navigation of the Potomac will cut off every thing within a day's driving to it (say ten miles) as far down as the mouth of Goose Creek, then what remains; the distance between Bull Run and Potomac does not exceed twenty miles, one half that scope will transport their commodities by the river; of the remaining half, should the road be conducted by the Court-House, a large proportion will, at all seasons, be obliged, from situation and the difficulty of getting into the Court-House road, to make use of the old road, and in dry weather nearly the whole will take that route to avoid the toll. But, for a moment, suppose that the navigation of those rivers should not be effected to the extent herein contended. Yet it is not doubted that those rivers will take down a great quantity of the produce within reach of them; if the fact is doubted let an enquiry be made among those living within ten miles of Potomac, and hear their answer. The writer has, and is well assured that the most of them will have recourse to the river. Another light, as it respects the Court-House route, this subject may be placed in; the Centerville and Leesburg roads, from the Blue Ridge, run in a parallel direction not more than twelve miles apart; what will be the certain consequence of opening another road between the two, subject to a tax, and leaving the other two open? Can it be any other than the old roads being constantly resorted to, in dry weather, to avoid the tax? This will destroy to the foundation every prospect of compensation to the Subscribers. The result in taking the road by the Court-House, the writer is assured, will be no other than grievous disappointment both to the public and the Stockholders. The writer is further of opinion, that the taking the road from Centerville to the ford upon Little River, is not the route to produce the greatest good to the public, and suitable compensation to the Subscribers. From a view of the subject as here represented, even in that direction, the body of people benefitted will be truly small. It appears to the writer, that the road, at or near Centerville, should diverge, cross Bull Run and direct its course towards the Gap in the Bull Run Mountain, called Graham's Mill Gap, this would lead to the body of people under the Ridge, about Ashby's & Manassah's Gaps, would be equally convenient as the present road by Centerville (which, it is presumed, will be always kept open) to those about Snicker's Gap and Middleburgh.

This route would draw into the Turnpike a great body of people, would open an extensive new trade to the Town of Alexandria, at present cut off from it through the want of roads, a subject well worth reflecting on, as full four-fifths of the burden of the road will fall upon the inhabitants of that Town. It will not cost more to take the road to the Gap in the Bull Run mountain, than to the Ford of Little River. It is hoped, that some person better acquainted with the geography of the country than the writer, will come forward and more fully explain the subject. Hitherto it has been altogether confined within the limits of Potomac and Bull Run, too contracted a field, which cannot possibly yield benefits proportioned to the expence. The writer recommends to the subscribers, to consider the subject well, before they take a step which cannot be afterwards rectified.

A SUBSCRIBER.

Late Foreign Intelligence.

PARIS, Aug. 21.

The existing circumstances have compelled the Government to redouble its vigilance on our coasts, and such measures have been adopted that no spy, no fomentor of troubles, can land from England on our shore, without his being almost inevitably arrested. In consequence of this strict precaution, J. Harvie Christie, an Englishman, was arrested as a spy, and tried before the military tribunal of the 15th division. But having justified himself from the charge, he was acquitted by an unanimous suffrage.

Thus, notwithstanding the just resentment which fills the mind of every Frenchman against a Government which is guilty towards us of so many and grave offences, notwithstanding that prejudice which may be supposed to spring from the hostile state of the two nations justice preserved its ascendancy, and the sacred rights of innocence were as much respected in an enemy as they would have been in a Frenchman.

Since the capture of the Minerva frigate, the English keep themselves several leagues off the coast of Cherbourg. That frigate will soon be in a condition to put to sea; her guns are on board, and her last mast is about to be set up. The labours of the Mole are going on with activity. Several thousand workmen are employed on Fort Bonaparte, and more are daily arriving.

The privateer of Bordeaux, the Reprisaille, has taken by boarding after an action of an hour, the English packet, the King George armed with 12 pounders, and carried her into a Spanish port. She had on board a box containing 15,000 carats of rough diamonds, and 31,321 piastres.

LONDON, Aug. 25.

The celebrated George, with other French Emigrants, have lately left London, no doubt on some secret expedition.

A private letter from Paris of the 18th inst. states the following:

"It is now understood, in the best informed circles, that the First Consul, before his departure to execute his grand projects and his plan of campaign, exercised the two principal privileges granted to him by a Senatus Consultum. By the first, he will pass an amnesty in favour of all criminals in custody, except those confined for conspiring against the state, for murder and outrage; and that by the second he will deposit with the Senate the nomination of his successor."

Aug. 27.

Some of the late Consular measures in Holland having occasioned a remonstrance on the part of the Dutch, delivered, however, with all that military which a sense of their hopeless situation could inspire, in which the inevitable ruin that would come upon their commerce, by the adoption of the measures, was forcibly pointed out, the First Consul, from hasty words to more hasty at last declared, in a fit of rage, that he would destroy the basis on which such mercenary arguments were founded, by annihilating the trade of Holland so effectually, that they should not have a single ship of any kind left to them.

It appears by letters from Vienna, that Champagny, the French Ambassador, is immediately to be recalled. There is no reason to think that Bonaparte has been dissatisfied with the services of this Minister. His recall is designed to afford him an opportunity of more distinguished services to the Great Nation at this interesting moment. Citizen Champagny was useful at the Court of Vienna; but it is supposed that his advice would be still more profitable in another department. He is therefore to be invested with a naval appointment, and is to furnish his proportion of assistance in digesting the plan of invasion. If we may judge from what is known of the state of French preparation for a descent, some changes of Ministry would certainly be highly expedient.

Aug. 29.

Dumourier, it is now said, came to England in consequence of an invitation, not from the French Princes, but from the Duke of York. It will be well recollected, that toward the conclusion of the American war, an invasion of this country was meditated by the French. The plan adopted at that time was digested by some of the ablest engineers in France, and though Dumourier was to have acted only a subordinate part in the enterprise, every particular of the scheme was perfectly known to him. Bonaparte has since become possessed of this plan; and we find that Dumourier, has furnished government with the most important information with the view of guarding against it.

It is confidently asserted that France has consented to withdraw its troops from the borders of the Elbe and the Weser, which are to be occupied by Prussian troops, and that General Blucher, the Prussian commander in Westphalia, has sent orders to several regiments to hold themselves ready to march for that destination.

August 30.

A French messenger, or perhaps rather a messenger through France, arrived on Sunday morning or yesterday morning. Letters have been received from France, but chiefly, we believe, from the towns on the coast and in the neighborhood of Calais. They contain no news of any consequence. No Paris Journals came over. The story about a change at Paris is evidently groundless. It is said, however, that letters from Captain Hotham repeat his having received intelligence that the labors of boat building, and of equipping two fail of the line in Holland, had been countermanded by orders from the Batavian government. The reason of this is said to be, that they are in want of suitable materials. We do not, however, vouch for the truth of the statement.

The Funds were yesterday rather better which might be accounted for without any political rumour or speculation, as there were large purchases from the Court of Chancery, &c.

Recent dispatches have been received from Madrid, but it is not known what decision that cabinet have come to respecting the present war. There can be no doubt of the inclination of Spain to remain at peace, if Bonaparte will permit her. In a Holl paper which was received yesterday, the following whimsical account of a marriage is given:

"On the 14th inst. Thomas Freeman, formerly of Leeds, but now of Wakefield, aged 70, to Sarah Preston, aged 84. An amour has subsisted between this tender pair for 17 years, and though about two years ago the rogue Clapd, in one of his frolics, had dashed the cup of bliss from

August 31.

It is certain that the French government is extremely vigilant to prevent any of the former leaders of the Vendéens carrying on any intercourse with their old partisans. There is a report, which we hope is not true, that some of them have been taken prisoners. They ought to be extremely cautious. Amidst all these alarms, however, Bonaparte will find it difficult to spare a disposable force for the invasion of England. That he has such a force, without weakening points which he is now more than ever obliged to guard, we are very much inclined to doubt. The number of his troops is grossly exaggerated. In the mean time this country has only to preserve a vigorous, elevated and menacing posture, to convince Bonaparte that he has no chance of bringing the war to a conclusion by a desperate coup de main, or even of making any preponderance in negotiation. He may, therefore, seriously encourage the mediation of foreign powers, to extricate him from the most awkward dilemma.

There was a report yesterday that the Dutch had positively refused to co-operate with the French in the preparation for the invasion of this country. This we did not believe, because, however reluctant the Dutch are to assist the French, they dare not at the present express a feeling that would only draw down upon them some new acts of violence and oppression.

According to a private letter from Paris dated the 22th inst. a great number of Albanians and Greeks, have been observed in that city, and are known to be in the pay of government. Not a day passes but some of them set out on secret destinations. Much is said respecting a plan of disembarking troops, which Government have decided on, and fond hopes are entertained that as soon as the French troops make their appearance in Albania and the Morea, those countries which are supposed to be French at heart, will rise into rebellion. It is even pretended that for a long time past measures have been taken to organize a Greek army. But all these projects are subordinate to that which is cherished in preference to every other, to wit, the invasion of Ireland. The close alliance between Spain and the French Government compels the former country to make preparations. Spain is much exhausted. The cabinet of Madrid has made representations with a view to be enabled to observe a strict neutrality in the present war; it has been permitted not to come to any determination until her galleons shall have arrived. The armaments which are made necessary by the remonstrances of England, who presses the court of Spain to come to an explanation may be employed either to transport troops to Ireland, should the disturbances of that country continue to furnish a hope of the success of their effecting a landing, or of co-operating in the expedition to the Levant, if the expedition against Ireland should not take place.

A variety of contradictory rumors still prevail respecting the progress and final issue of the Northern mediation. According to some politicians, the question is advanced so far, that Bonaparte has consented to leave England in possession of Malta, provided it be not required that England should have the guarantee of any of the great powers of the continent for the conservation of that island. As to the indemnity to be granted to the Grand Master, whom Bonaparte has elected, it is said that the First Consul will make him a member of his Conservative Senate.

Accounts from Lisbon by the last mail state, that there has been a serious tumult amongst the soldiers in that city. It lasted four days, during which many lives were lost. These disturbances originated in a dispute between two of the regular regiments quartered, and the regiment of police guards; but at length, by the spirited behavior of the latter, and particularly of a detachment commanded by a French emigrant of the name of Novion, order was restored, though the populace seconded the regular foldiers. One of the regiments, commanded by Don Gomez Freireira is banished to Cascaes, and its commander is confined in the Tower. On the 3d inst. however, the city was in a state of tranquillity; but the precaution had been taken by government to double the police guards and patrols.

Sporting Intelligence.

Yesterday was run for over the Rappahannock

Jockey Club course, in this vicinity, the long contemplated COLT RACE, which for number of Horses and magnitude of Purse, has never yet been equalled on this side the Atlantic. Of the twenty one horses that had been entered, at Two Hundred Dollars each, half forfeit, eleven were withdrawn by reason of lameness and other accidents, but nine, (fire eyed, and rampant) took the turf, pawing with generous impatience for the race, and for victory. The concourse was immense, the sympathies of all were raised to the highest acme of heart throbbing anxiety. The first heat was run in 3 minutes 51 seconds, and the second in 3 minutes 50 seconds. The result was as follows:

HEALTH-OFFICE.

OCTOBER 13.

The Committee of Health report four deaths for the 24 hours ending this morning at 10 o'clock.

They acknowledge, with gratitude, the receipt of Twenty-Five Dollars from a citizen, and Ten Dollars from an absent citizen by the hands of Mr. James Lawrason, as donations for the use of the Poor.

S. SNOWDEN, Sec'y.

Men of extraordinary merit are modest and unassuming—the upstart is arrogant and haughty. These are the ugliest traits of men in elevated situations, as well as in the humbler stations in life—and we need go no further for the test, than the character of Washington, on the one hand, and Bonaparte on the other. Fortune is depicted blind and her favorite votaries generally infatuated.—Hence we find the good things of this world lavished often upon the most unworthy. In one of these libertine moods, the Goddes led Bonaparte, a Corsican, to the throne of France. By wisdom and moderation, he might have been a blessing to millions of his fellow creatures. By pride and ambition, he has brought down the execration of distant nations. His thirst for dominion is unbounded. Church and state are equally under his control. "I and his Holiness" (said Bonaparte) "have made choice of you," &c. when he addressed the Cardinal Legate.

The rage of the Chief Consul, on being informed that placards, with "Vive le Roi" in red letters at the top, were stuck up in Paris, was boundless. It was a much more irritable matter to his Consulship, than that of the English firing into Boulogne, while he in pomp paraded round the town. It spoke to his heart: for the general cry of Vive le Roi, he well knows is to him as fatal as the warrant of death—and unless he conquers England very speedily, the golden harvest may be gathered in St. Cloud instead of St. James's.

Bankruptcies in France.

The last French mail brings us the news of forty failures at Paris, eighteen at Bordeaux, fourteen at Marseilles, fifteen at Lyons, seventeen at Nantz, six at St. Malo, nine at Rouen, ten at Havre, six at Dunkirk, two at Ostend, eleven at Flushing, eight at Rotterdam, sixteen at Amsterdam, ten at Genoa, twelve at Leghorn, and eight at Naples. From Russia we hear that ten Silesian manufacturers have failed, and there is an apprehension, should the Elbe continue to be in a state of blockade, that their number will in a short time be doubled.

London Paper.

The Editor of the Ægis, in his last paper, treats his brother editors of the democratic side with a high degree of contempt. He concludes his reflections upon them with the following passages:

"Reproachful and overbearing, they demand a timid and servile acquiescence. Impatient of control or contradiction, they revolt at the appearance of restraint or resistance. Obstinate and unaccommodating, they require of every advocate of their cause, to become 'like mere clay in the hands of the potter!'"

"In one instance, at least, they are deceived. We shall never yield to their opinions from the dread of their resentment; we shall never abandon the ground we have taken, from the fear of being abandoned by those, who, without provocation, have become our most deadly and inveterate enemies."

It has sometimes been denied that the men into whose hands the government of the U. States has unhappily fallen, were hostile to the commercial interests of the country. But it is a fact, that while they were in the minority, they frequently threw out sentiments of that nature. Mr. Madison, in his commercial speech in Congress, speaking of our merchants, says, "There are the strongest reasons not to follow the mercantile opinion in this country: it might be the opinion of the very country of which we ought not to take counsel."

APHORISM.

We frequently fall into error and folly, not because the true principles are not known, but because, for a time, they are not remembered; he may therefore justly be numbered among the benefactors of mankind, who contracts the great rules of life into short sentiments that may easily be impressed on the memory, and taught by frequent recollection to recur habitually on the mind.

The malicious censures of our enemies, if we make a right use of them, may prove of greater advantage to us, than the civilities of our best friends.

ROBERT & JOHN GRAY,

WHEATON'S

GENUINE PATENT JAUNDICE

BITTERS,

A MEDICINE extremely useful when Jaundicy and Billious Complaints are so prevalent among the citizens of America and the West Indies. They are a useful and efficacious Medicine for curing Jaundicy and Billious disorders, and removing that sinking, faint, distressed feeling at the stomach, difficulty of breathing, loss of appetite, and sleepy, dull heaviness in the forepart of the day, weakness and trembling of the limbs, dizziness of the head, and yellowness of countenance, complaints so common to jaundicy and billious people.

Also removing constipation of the bowels, obstructions of urine, cholicky complaints, pukings and purgings, indigestion, sick head ache, rheumatic complaints, &c. (which arise from a collection of four, billious matter in the stomach) and at length restoring the constitution to strength and vigor.

They are also found very useful to carry off worms, and cure ricketty children, and may be used with safety in all constitutions, ages and sexes.

The many cures that have been effected in New England, by the above medicine, (as may be seen in the bills) prevent the necessity of further recommendation.

LIKEWISE,

Wheaton's Patent Itch Ointment.

The only medicine in the world which will certainly cure the ITCH, without having in it any thing either dangerous or disagreeable; it being composed mostly of ingredients never before discovered or used in that disorder. One box cures a person, and there need be no waiting after the use of it, as the skin is generally left cleaner and smoother after the use of it than before.
